

A business method comprising the tethering of a physical product using a first block chain token and second block chain token, wherein the first block chain token is a centralized block chain token and the second block chain token is a decentralized block chain token.